1) She breathes the cool and refreshing air,
 Chilled is her skin by the Pō'aihala rain,
 She wears the mokihana, the adornment of Kaiona,
 She shivers in the cold, the chilly cold of California.

2) She delights and is pleased with the creeping strawberries,
 And the cold mist that spreads and enfolds her,
 She remains with great love that comes from within,
 From her great heart whose depths cannot be measured.

3) At the waterfall of Niagara she saw the rainbow arch
 And the mist that spread all around there,
 She shrank from the water spray, shivered in the cold,
 And found warmth in the bosom of Hi'ilei.

4) Answer, oh lady who walks in the sunshine of Kaiona,
 Where mirages dance on the 'ōhai-covered plain,
 In the very foggy rain on the cold night of Ko'olau,
 My companion of the kī and kukui groves of Kaho'iwai.
